I found myself reading Monoculture: How One Story Is Changing Everything non-stop, with a pencil in hand, underlining like crazy. That totally took me by surprise, but then, I didn't know I'd be reading an astute explanation about what I've been feeling recently, something I couldn't put my finger on.

The story that's changing your life - The Longest Chapter

Which is ironic: because Monoculture is about one story. (And I know how much you all love to read stories.) The premise of F.S. Michaels' work is that our culture is shaped by a single, master story. It's one "narrative in society that takes over the others, shrinking diversity and forming a monoculture".
